| 4        | Lifting the timing end head, 2005 |  A large yellow crane is lifting a heavy, dark-colored engine component, likely the timing end head, in a workshop. The crane's arm is extended upwards, and the component is suspended by a chain. The workshop has a corrugated metal roof and various tools and equipment visible in the background. A green safety railing is in the foreground. |  A small thumbnail image showing the same scene as the main image, with the yellow crane lifting the engine component. |

| 4        | Starting the Worthington for the first time Jan 2004 |  A large, dark-colored industrial steam engine is the central focus. A person wearing a blue long-sleeved shirt, blue trousers, and black rubber boots stands on a metal platform with railings positioned above the engine. The person is facing away from the camera, looking down at the machinery. The engine features a large horizontal cylinder on the left, a large flywheel at the bottom left, and various pipes, valves, and smaller components. The background consists of a corrugated metal ceiling and walls, suggesting an indoor industrial or museum setting. The lighting is somewhat dim, with a warm, yellowish tint. |  A small, square thumbnail version of the main image, showing the same steam engine and person from a slightly different angle or crop. |
